The Union as it Was and the Constitution as It Is.

This is the object of all genuine Union men. It is no reply to tell us of abuses unabuses, whether on the part of the North or the South. We don't want Buchananism under the Constitution, nor Abolitionism. We don't want the laws of Congress under the Constitution defled, and their execution resisted successfully by mobs. We don't want State laws made on purpose to thwart the object of the Constitution. We don't want open rebellion against the law-armed rebellion, such as was got up by the Abolitionists in Kansas; nor a fraudulent evasion of the purpose of Congress, as was attempted by Southern fanatics in that Territory. These were all abuses, and for them all there was ample remedy provided in the ballot-box. The atrocious frauds and the bloody remedies were all in defiance of the Constitution. The Union as it was is not a Union with such abuses. We do not expect that under the Constitution as it is weshall have no abuses. As long as government is administered by men, always fallible and sometimes depraved, we shall not have a government without wrongs. It is an idle retort to bring up abuses under the Constitution to discredit the sentiment the Constitution as it is and the Union as it was.

The Union as it was made was a Union of free and slave States, and such it has always been. Our fathers took the States as they were, and formed a Union with them as they were. That was the only possible Union then, and it is the only possible Union now. They did not undertake to remodel the States, to make them uniform on the subject of slavery. They knew it was a task beyond their power, and beyond their right to undertake. It never occurred to them to confer on a part of the States the power to force a uniformity.

In the Government they made they con ferred no such power, and those who administer it violate their oaths when they undertake the task. The framers of the Constitution have made provisions looking to the existence of slavery in some of the States. This everybody knows. Those who undertake the abolition of slavery, then, propose to elter the provisions of the Government, to nullify some of its provisions

Military necessity. There is a fair meanthings upon military necessity, but permanent changes in laws or Constitutions cannot be done under such a plea. In case of rebellion, the President is authorized to enforce the laws of the United States. That is all the power he has. Can he trample on State laws and State Constitutions? They are desacred as the laws and Constitution of the United States. If a President must sacrifice them to execute the laws of the United States he is estopped. Our Governor did some bagging, before Buell's arrival. swears to support our Constitution, and to see that our laws are faithfully executed He has the same right to enforce the laws of this State and defend its Constitution as the President has to execute the laws of the United States. He has a right to do it by force of arms against any power whatever. If it be a doubtful case which has authority, the Supreme Court is the tribunal to settle the question, not one of the parties. Thus the Constitution as it is has provided

[Correspondence Louisvi lle Democrat.] BOWLINGGREEN, KY., Oct. 23, '62. Editors Democrat-Gentlemen: If you wish to see a practical example of the sad ravages of war, behold the track of the despoiler's hand in the beautiful State of Kentucky, then get aboard the cars and ride from Bowlinggreen to Green river. All along the road you will see unmistakable signs of a large army having passed over serted camps, the lines of breastwork and frowning forts, and, more than all, the charred remains of bridges, and the blackened ruins of the once tasty dwellings, speak in language too plain to be mistaken, that on the soil contending hosts have met, maneuvered, and fought! It is now a desolate picture, and its very desolation tells that time will render it the "classic" ground of Kentucky. But I know that all soberminded men would forego the future interest to be attached to it, if it could be restored to its wonted peace and prosperity. Swiftly the cars roll you on, and the desolate scene is only relieved of its monotony here and there by a blooming field. As we here and there by a blooming field. As we near Green river the long lines of breastworks, the strong stockade and frowning fort, rise to view and absorb the attention for it now is known as "bloody ground; and gazing, we are reminded of the late brief struggle and the humbling of our na-

One of the noted features along the route is the straggling parties of paroled "conitive will be seen that Gen. Buell's orders been implicitly obeyed, at Perryville, Bragg's entire army would, without doubt, have been surrounded, and most probably captured. You have noticed confederacy. They all agree that war is a nuisance, and long for the palmy days of peace which they enjoyed when the flag of the Union waved over a united band of States.

Bowlinggreen is not all quiet to-night.

Crittenden was moving eastward on road nearly parallel with that on which McCook was moving, and was graduating Of course, it would have been better, so firm in the belief. And to give support to McCook as possible. The design was that far as mere brute-force was concerned, if lead them back sufficiently far to leave Crittenden directly on their flank.

[From the Richmond Whig, Oct. 20.] THE KENTUCKY ARMY.

Our news from Kentucky does not, by any means, justify the expectations which had been founded on the felegraphic intelligence of the previous few days. By the tenor of the telegrams received from the West, we had been led to believe that Gen. Bragg had gained a brilliant victory, and that the enemy's army was thoroughly beaten, if not completely demoralized. We can scarcely conceive how such reports get into circulation. Battles here, battles there, battles everywhere were described, all of them being Confederate victories, and resulting in the capture of multitudinous prisoners and infinite artillery. To be sure it was rather difficult to comprehend the strategy of these complicated move-ments, and the tactics of these numerous fields; but, nevertheless, the reports came from so many sources, and agreed so well in their general features, that we were inof truth. Yet it turns out that after the battle of Perryville, on the 8th inst., no general action was fought. Kirby Smith encountered Crittenden's forces near Frankfort, and defeated them, and this is the last we hear of any fighting. For some days nothing is known of the movements of eur army. We had imagined it advancing on Louisville; or, perhaps, crossing the Kentucky river, and threatening Cincinnati; we had cherished the delusion that it was, at least, holding a commanding position in the midst of the fertile and teeming region ing region of central Kentucky. But, all this time, it was retreating—falling back is the polite term—from the neighborhood of Louisville to the extreme southwestern corner of the State; from the productive blue grass country, to the mountain counties, where life is a burthen to a grasshopper. Our last advices render it certain that Bragg's army is abandoning Kentucky, and that it is now in position in the neigh-

The General of the Ohio river—something

The General of the Ohio river—something battles. We had anticipated from Gen.

We had formed exalted hopes of the great expended from the led across the Tennessee A frightful accident occurred on the distance which he led across the Tennessee ore than fruitless marches and barren river, and nearly up to the suburbs of Louisville. His long delay at Tupelo, his hesitancy at Chattanooga, his tardy advance into Kentucky, had shaken public confidence; but few were willing to con-demn so long as opportunity yet remained for a consummation of the grand objects of the campaign. It is all over now. The Kentucky movement in the hands of Gen. Bragg has turned out to be simply a fizzle. No other word can so appropriately describe it. It has been, from beginning to end, a brilliant blunder and a magnificent failure. Without losing a battle, Gen. Bragg has suffered all the consequences of defeat; after marching hundreds of miles in pursuit of a specific state of the s wille, and that Kirby Smith defeated Crit-tenden near Frankfort. We know that we whipped Nelson at Richmond, and that Morgan performed the most gallent ex-ploits at many points; that we took town after town, and captured vast numbers of prisoners. All these are achievements which will adorn our history; but will they compensate for the disappointment of our hopes, and the failure of our grand schemes for the liberation of Kentucky and the re-demption of Tennessee? The fact redemption of Tennessee? The fact re-mains that, after all our glorious successes. mains that, after all our giorious successive our marches, battles and victories, our army is near Cumberland Gap, and the enemy in a casin of all Kentucky. There is nothing new from the line of the Louisville and Nashville railroad. The last heard of John Morgan's force was in the skirmish with Colonel Wolford's caralry, in which some fifteen or twenty of Morgan's men were captured, near Brownsville. The line of the road is uninterrupted, the cars proceeding directly to Munfordville, where they unite with the train from Bowlinggreen. The bridge over Green river will be completed in a few days, and the cars will then pass on to Bowlinggreen

Recognition Again Talked. ostponement of the Draft in Philadelphia.

FORTRESS MONROE, Oct. 25. The following items are from the Richond Enquirer, of Oct. 23d : Travelers from Winchester report our army crossing the Potomac last Monday

A great many persons have sought and seceived permission to leave the Southern onfederacy. They are generally aliens, claiming protection of one or the other of he European consuls.
Our pickets attacked the enemy from several points near Nashville, at daylight on the 22d inst., driving in their pickets, killing several of them, and capturing 50. Among the killed is W. B. Governor Vance, of North Carolina, has issued a stirring appeal to the citizens of this State, in behalf of the army, and calls for contributions to clothe the soldiers for the coming winter.

The Richmond Whig, of October 23d, ontains the following:

The Yankee commissioner, J. P. Wood, who is now in this city, has notified the Confederate authorities that, hereafter persons claiming the protection of foreign governments, will not be allowed to proceed to he idominions of Lincoln, on the flag of truce boat.

The Lynchburg Republican says, there is a general stampede from Culpepper through-out the country, owing to an anticipated early advance of the Yankees in that direction. Having once suffered from the Federals, they are unwilling again to undergo a like treatment.

The Richmond Whig of Oct. 22d, says:

A letter from the Mayor of Wilmington, North Carolina, says, that for the first time, in many weary days, the reports of new cases of fever show a falling off, and now hope we have at last reached the worst. The Richmond Enquirer of the 24th, has the following: the following:

Savannah, Ga., Oct. 23d.—The Abolitionists attacked, in force, Pocataligo and Coosawatchie yesterday. They were gallantly repulsed to the gunboats, at McKay's Point and Bee's Creek Landing, by Colonel W. L. Walker, commanding the troops. The enemy came in 13 gunboats and transports.

The Charleston and Savannah Railroad is uninjured. The Abolitionists left their dead and wounded on the field. Our cavalry force are in hot pursuit. [Signed] G. T. BEAUREGARD. Charleston, Oct. 23.—The gunboats of the enemy anchored, to-day, below Coosawatchie, and landed their forces. We have driven them back to their gunboats.
